Hoover Krepelka, LLP recently expanded its operations by opening a new 11,000-square-foot remodeled office at 1520 The Alameda.

SAN JOSE, Calif., Sept. 3, 2019 /PRNewswire-PRWeb/ -- Several years ago, Hoover Krepelka, LLP outgrew its office space as the anchor tenant at 1570 The Alameda and opened a satellite office in the adjacent building at 1530 The Alameda to accommodate overflow in caseload and staffing levels. The community-focused firm's rapid growth over the past five years is a result of increased client demand for excellence in family law legal representation, which in turn required the need to hire more attorneys and staff to effectively manage cases and to continue to offer unparalleled client service and support.

"Having our entire team housed under one roof streamlines our overall communication and operations and helps us to achieve a solid, cohesive culture for our employees. Our improved office accommodations provide clients a comfortable and refined ambience along with advanced technology as we complete our paperless office initiative," said Robert L. Hoover ("Bob"), founder of what is now Hoover Krepelka, LLP, which has grown to be the largest law firm in Silicon Valley that exclusively practices family law.

The new spacious office features an expanded client resource center, multiple conference rooms and a strategic floor plan that allows for privacy for opposing parties and their counsel when in-house for settlement conferences, depositions and even in-house trials. Technology has also been turned up a notch at 1520 The Alameda, including a state-of-the-art large screen TV for video conferencing, and the ability for attorneys to manage cases, evidence and all pertinent documents expeditiously and electronically.

"Clients, experts, judges, community partners, trusted advisers and other visitors will also enjoy our private lounge and artwork that was thoughtfully selected by partner James J. Hoover to pay homage to the diversity of cultures of the clients we serve in Silicon Valley," noted Bob Hoover. The diversity and inclusion we have today is especially important to Bob, who began practicing law in 1960, when interracial marriage was just becoming legal in some states.

Since 1960, Hoover Krepelka, LLP's multilingual attorneys have made a commitment to offer a full in-person, one-hour legal consultation to those facing divorce, regardless of one's ability to pay or intent to retain. The firm is also renowned for offering a diverse set of resources for their clients and has a designated Director of Community Relations to ensure client needs for supplemental services required during a divorce process are effectively and accurately addressed.

Among Hoover Krepelka, LLP's attorneys are three Certified Family Law Specialists, a coveted and prestigious accreditation designated by the California State Bar Board of Legal Specialization that only approximately 10% of family law attorneys in California achieve. "We recently added two post-bar law clerks and combined, our attorneys have over 140 collective years of legal experience, which provides a great advantage for our clients," added Managing Partner, Travis I. Krepelka. Mr. Krepelka is one of very few family law attorneys who handle appeals in Santa Clara County. Partner James J. Hoover recently won the Avvo Clients' Choice Award for Divorce for the fifth time, an incredible honor which has been achieved through continuous positive client reviews.

This extensive legal experience has made Hoover Krepelka, LLP one of the preeminent law firms for handling complex, high-conflict, high-asset divorce cases, child custody disputes and divorces surrounding domestic violence. Hoover Krepelka, LLP often acts as a resource to smaller firms and can quickly accept urgent matters involving domestic violence restraining orders and possible life-threatening scenarios by having a strong and experienced team of attorneys to jump in at a moment's notice.

Partners James J. Hoover and Travis I. Krepelka continue to volunteer their time to the Santa Clara County Judiciary by serving as Judge Pro Tem; a system by which a specialized attorney is appointed to serve as a substitute judge. "With our enhanced office facility, community resources and experienced legal team, we look forward to providing our clients with continued excellence in legal representation for years to come," concluded Bob Hoover.
